The Emergency Code for a plane hijacking is 7500: a tense, intense thriller, told from the cockpit. A flight from Berlin to Paris. Everyday routine in the cockpit of an Airbus A319. Co-pilot Tobias Ellis is preparing the plane for take-off, which then follows without incident. Then we hear shouting in the passenger cabin. A group of young men try and storm the cockpit, among them 18-year old Vedat. A fight begins between crew and attackers, with the desire on the one hand to save individual lives and on the other to avert an even bigger catastrophe. The cockpit door becomes a battleground - and Tobias ends up being the arbiter over life and death

I'm not good in english, and usually lazy to writes anything down, but I want to help people who loves to read review first before watching anything (like me. Recently, I find nothing goods to watch anymore, I have seen thousand of hijacking movies, series. agreed that this one belongs to one of them... This is just a small B movie with few actors involved, a good pace and thrilling moments, Joseph Gordon Levitt alone which I admired could easily handle this standalone movie. But the other cast are not dissappointing at all. People are complaining they seen this kinda movies thousand times before and yes that's correct. The story are similar to any other movies, but why don't we just try to give this a chance and sit back, enjoy the thrilling rides. I'm giving this 10/10 cause I enjoy this small films franchise, and this one does not dissappoint me at all. Overall it is worth it.

I watched this movie without subtitles. Almost half of the talking is in German so when the terrorist took control of the plane and starting speaking to control tower in German, I didn't understand a word but i as waiting for him to finally say

- Allah Akbar- to know that one of these movies where Muslims are the bad guys.

this is getting too Cliche and it has got to stop somewhere.
other than, that it's still lousy boring movie that is not worth your time.
