I was a bit sceptical about this one. In the cesspool of bollywood entertainment, it's hard to find good content. If you're watching it just for jumpscare or shock content, please don't, you might get disappointed. This one delivers much more than that, believe me, even I don't prefer to have politics/wokeness in my entertainment but this one depicts the harsh reality of indian women in the colonial India, sadly some of them still exist in the modern society. The best thing is they did all this without compromising with the storyline and a much better CGI work than most of the bollywood movies out there. The actors did not disappoint as well. Tripti Dimri, Paoli Dam and Rahul Bose excelled at their job.
