Here the waters of the Tsauchab River are blocked from reaching the ocean by a formidable wall of dunes, stretching sixty kilometres to the sea. Occasionally the flood waters of the river reach Sossusvlei and gather to form a small, shallow lake in the middle of the dunes. Although difficult climbing, the view from the top of one of the highest dunes in the world is well worth the effort, besides which, it is great fun sliding, jumping or even rolling back down the dunes! Sunrise and sunset are the best times to see this dynamic scenery which is truly a photographers dream!
