Movie was very slow through first half. It focused way too much on the circle of friends and their relationships. I get it. you need to establish relationships before delving into movie, but it took WAYYYY to long to get to the fun part. Kevin Hart's comedic talent was wasted on him being based on Danny Glover (booooring. The Rock was similarly not as funny, as his portrayal of Danny Devito was a stretch (enough of the the New York accent already. Jack Black played the straight (serious) man, which again, is a waste of his talent. He is too funny to waste in that role. The rest of the characters were good. Basically, although this movie wasn't terrible, the first movie was much better than this one.

The first movie was way better than this one. After a point this film gets pretty boring and predictable, there is only so much CGI you can take. The ladder crossing scene was easily the best scene in the whole film but the rest of film never raises to that level in terms of entertainment. The first film didn't bore me, but this one bores you and there is no real chemistry between the actors and you feel sorry for the young cast as the final resolution doesn't feel earned. Also I saw the film in 4DX, must say I was pretty disappointed. Having sat through quite a few 4DX films now it all feels a bit same and gimmicky to me, but its probably fun for someone who's never experienced it.
