story=1969. Rick Dalton was once the star of a highly popular TV series but a few bad choices have set his career back, leaving him wondering if he should quit showbiz altogether. His best friend is Cliff Booth, an aging stuntman who was Dalton's stunt-double in movies and TV. His career is largely over. While Booth ekes out an existence, Dalton still lives a life of relative luxury in Hollywood, rubbing shoulders with the rich and famous. In fact, his neighbours are Roman Polanski and Sharon Tate; Ratings=8,3 of 10; Runtime=2 hour 41 M; Score=450557 Votes; Genre=Comedy;

There ain't no history like a Tarantino history, cause a Tarantino history is "history plus! Much like the sinking of the Titanic (one of the most tragic, horrible and dramatic events of modern history, with great loss of life) just wasn't quite "zingy" enough until James Cameron tweaked it into screen-worthiness with his corny little touches and plot points, Tarantino can take ho-hum. Silly events (like Hitler's extermination of a race and The Manson Murders) and use his special talent to just kick it up a notch to the point of being noteworthy and attention-getting, all praise Quinton! It was all just a little spare on interest until he added his special ju ne sais quoi, his touch. Lord knows, his "improved" versions are superior, the way things really should have gone down. He's like a child saying "If I'd ever gotten my hands on Hitler I'd have shown him what-for." or "Charlie Manson wouldn't have killed me! I'd have gotten my flame thrower and turned him into a marshmallow."

At least there's no confusion about the fact that it's an alternative take, a Tarantino take, but real history is inviolable, and my concern is still that there's a price to pay in credibility when you mess with the truth.

I found it quite ironic that mention is made of Disney, calling him a genius, he himself a great meddler with history and a story or two.

I have 3 remarks about this movie:

- The movie relies on the audience knowing who was Manson and what happened to Sharon Tate.
 It might be common knowledge in the US but outside of it it's not. Without this knowledge the tension of waiting for a tragedy to happen dissapears.
- 2. The first 2h is a collage of mood setting / world building sequences that don't push the story forward. For the first 2h I wasn't looking how the story will develop but how it will start. I understand that there might be people who will enjoy this (60s yay. I didn't.
- 3. When I first watched Pulp Fiction I really was disapointed it ended so fast. With Once Upon. I was glad it was actually over. To put it simply: I wasn't entertained (and the ending did not compensate the wait for it.

Boring. Granted, it was a tribute to old Hollywood, which was interesting at most. Best part was the last 20 minutes.
