Gm scoob. Tw scoob. This movie is very faithful to the source material by making plenty of references to the tv show and the characters have the same personality as their tv show counterparts. The animation is good. The character design is impressive. well at least for the new characters. It tells us the story of how Shaggy met Scoob and the rest of the Mystery Inc. gang. The original score is good for the most part. It also has important messages for the children watching this movie. Finally, the credits animation is just about identical to that of the show. Good qualities aside, this movie does have some problems.

One of them is the voice actors being different from the tv show or the older movies (not a big deal. Another being the pop culture references (Pop Vinyls, Simon Cowell, the Dab dance, popular songs, the Cats musical etc. product placement (Google Maps ripoff, Netflix, Tinder, etc) and shameless self promotion (references to DC Comics, Harry Potter, A Star is Born, etc.) Another problem is that they are always trying to be hip every 5-10 minutes with all the modern day internet references and innuendos. The final problem being some of the obvious clichés present in every movie, even this one.

Overall, I like this movie more than I dislike it for what it is. If you are a longtime fan of this show or you are just getting into it, I recommend checking this movie out.

Almost the worst animated film I've ever seen in all my life. this was made with the quality of a nickelodeon movie, and released as a premium home video release? This film is just far more brightly colorful and fake looking than the cartoon, there's no more pastels and muted colours, its all bizarre acid trippy colours, which kids even feel unsettled by. if they take the next film seriously, which i hope they don't even consider, they should approach it from the film point of view, not the franchise point of view, and film outside of nickelodeons facility range. This movie is just awfully dumb. Sorry.
