"WHY? is the big question. Why does Night Shyamalan does this to the movie goes each time. If this was his attempt to win back his estranged audience, he should try harder the next time. Messing up with original ideas is one thing; but, adapting a world famous TV series and THEN messing it up takes a lot of talent! Against the backdrop of a weak storyline, performance was the biggest shocker, closely followed by the direction. The 'human element' in the movie was so expressionless and staid that Shyamalan could have done much better with some computer graphics. Precocious Aang appears more like a naïve school kid. Dev Patel looked out of place, so did Jackson Rathbone and Cliff Curtis. In fact, the entire cast looked confused. The settings and special effects failed to reach the epic proportions of the original work and seemed rather grim. I haven't seen the 3D version, but can certainly say it won't do any wonders either. In line with various other reviewers, I would suggest, if you really wanna watch this, wait for the DVDs. For Shyamalan, taking into account the fate of this part, he should seriously consider dropping the sequels.
