Reviews: During the year 1999, a man named Thomas Anderson (also known as Neo), lives an ordinary life. A software techie by day and a computer hacker by night, he sits alone at home by his monitor, waiting for a sign, a signal - from what or whom he doesn't know - until one night, a mysterious woman named Trinity seeks him out and introduces him to that faceless character he has been waiting for: Morpheus. A messiah of sorts, Morpheus presents Neo with the truth about his world by shedding light on the dark secrets that have troubled him for so long / directors: Lana Wachowski / 9,6 / 10 Star / Country: USA / audience score: 1601705 Votes / Laurence Fishburne

The concept is original, but I was amazed at how unintentionally hilarious most of this film is. All those times characters kept reverentially referring to blank, uninspiring Keanu Reeves as "the one" all the over the top martial arts posing and meaningless, new-agey babble - this is just an under-ventilated, overblown hodgepodge of a few good ideas hopelessly overpowered by a dizzying number of brainless cliches.

Once again, the MTV generation mistakes a lot of noise and flashy editing for good filmmaking. If it wasn't for the clever special effects, this would be MSTK3 fodder all the way.

This movie is made very cleverly. It mixes a lot of long-known philosophical ideas into one movie filled with action and special effects. A guaranteed way to succes. However, such an ambitious theme also sets more expectations, and after all has been considered, the only conclusion can be that no new philosophical insights emerge and no deep thoughts have been provoked once the credits start rolling...

I thought this movie was amazing. Sure a few of the scenes made me tired just looking at them, but isn't that part of the fun? I also thought that Keanu Reeves was perfectly cast, as well as Moss and Fishburne. The effects are absolutely awesome. I don't know why so many people didn't like this movie; it was pure entertainment. It is one of the best movies I have seen in a long time, and I think that anyone is looking for 2 hours of sci-fi action and adventure should also check it out.

I still say, if you want a good movie, check out The Matrix.
