The matrix 4. The matrix in order. The matrix reloaded trailer. The matrix review. The matrix hero-crossword. I read that Keanu Reeves only got his part in this movie because he told the Wachowskis his ideas on the philosophical angles of the 'Neo' character and the script in general. At that was just what the directors needed to help their pretensions of making something much more important than a movie and they haven't done too bad a job. The great thing is that they haven't forgotten the need to be entertaining, too.

The special effects are fantastic, the characterisations memorable (especially Hugo Weaving's Mr Smith) and the action spectacular, but sometimes the pacing drags a little bit.

The story line is intriguing and definitely sets you thinking about the greater implications of the story line (Christian parallels are many and well-constructed. I wonder, though, if the prequels/sequels that are planned will end up adding to or subtracting from (see Phantom Menace) the story so far constructed...

Keanu did a great job and no one else could have done as good of a job as he had. I work for a video store and most people love the movie as much as I do. The entire concept, everything about the movie was great. The effects, everything. Bring on the sequels, I just hope they can live up to the first one's huge standards.
