I was just about to give this movie a 10. I've seen the movie over a 1,000 times. Heck when I was in United Navy C school studying gas turbines 2001, I used to wake up and play the part of the instructor critiquing his flying and him getting upset and driving over the hill. My roommates hated my surround sound. I still do love that part.

But I have read some reviews and while everybody is right this is a must see film. I must say there were a lot better for that time. And the actors really didn't get to act much besides Tom and Kelly (the instructors real name) everybody else was like a side piece. Even the black guy who has good roles in other movies tried to sing along after Tom finished singing in the bar. I mean its just pretty much a Tom Cruise or bust movie.

And the director points that out if you get the actual Blue Ray of this. The extras in this movie are great. But Kelly playing the instructor is just too much for me. I'm glad they didn't try to get some eye candy in the movie to make people drool over her. She doesn't strike me as that. She did have a teacher look to her. But seriously her lines were just too corny, and too off and she didn't even sell them.

But I still give it an 8. The flying scenes were great then and they are great now. What most people don't realize that besides the crashing and burning. That was some actually F-14 photography. The US Navy had a little problem recruiting pilots at the time. So they let them film this. But the director had no extra footage left over. They used it all for the first film and the Navy wasn't letting them come back for round two. Cause Paramount surely asked after the success. So on that note. There is nothing like it. Those are F-14's and it is great and amazing to watch.

They only lost two points cause the actors could have had more lines. And they had some great actors. Tom Skerit, Michael Ironside, Meg Ryan, Val Kilmer, Tim Robbins, and James Tolken were all great. Seeing them smoke on the ship was something to see to be honest. Can't do that now in the Navy. And yes you do get chewed out in parade rest. Also love the terminology they had. The director was asked about it, why didn't explain what a bogie was and other things that the general public wouldn't understand. He simply said "thats what adds to the movie. Also a flight pilot from the Navy told them not to fly the circles in the airplane cause its a useless combat move but they did it anyway against his wishes cause it provided for great action. And he later said he was surprised it did look good. So many nice and cool things about this movie. Just wish they got more of the other actors involved. Everything was riding on Tom Cruise performance. The director got lucky in this one that Tom came through.
